Guidelines Telephone and Voicemail Etiquette

A phone conversation is usually the first contact a person has with Los Angeles Southwest College. Students and individuals seeking information are trying to access our college, and anything we can do to make their interaction with us warm and sensitive will go a long way in projecting a “Helping” image.

Fundamental Rules

- Please pick up the phone no later than the fourth (4th) ring. Place current caller on hold if necessary, to answer in-coming call informing initial caller that they are being placed on hold momentarily.
- Answer the phone with name and department/division office and ask “How can I help you?”
- Offer a pleasant greeting
- Upon completion of your interaction with the caller, ask the caller “Have I assisted you with your issue,” or before transferring the call “is there anything else I can I assist you with before I transfer the call?”
- Before transferring the call, ensure that the person/department that the call is being transferred to is in the office. If the person/department is not available direct them to leave a voicemail on the requested person’s/department’s number.

Taking Messages

A message should always give the caller’s name, company, phone number and, if necessary, the best time to return the call. Failure to return calls is the most common complaints in business.

Speakerphone Etiquette

Always ask permission of the other person before talking to them on the speakerphone and always identify the other people in the room.

Transferring Calls

When transferring calls observe the following:

- Transfer calls only if you are certain that you cannot help the caller and reasonably sure the person to whom the caller is being transferred can help the caller.
- Give an explanation of why the call is being transferred.
- Always give the caller the phone number and name (department/or person) of the area they are being transferred to.
- Stay on the line until someone answers whenever possible to provide smooth transition for caller.
- If the caller seems annoyed about being transferred, suggest a call back rather than risk poor customer service. The caller may have been bounced from one wrong number to another several times, before reaching you.

Voice Greeting

To utilize voicemail as an effective means of communication, it is important to be succinct when recording your personal greeting and when leaving a message in another mailbox. Proper use of the telephone and voicemail system can result in a more productive working environment

When recording a greeting always include the following:

- Establish a standard greeting for your office for example: "Hello, you have reached
- Your name
- Department/office
- Location: at Los Angeles Southwest College
- Who to call for immediate assistance (if applicable)
- Add extended leaves or vacation dates

Leaving a Voicemail Message

When leaving a voicemail message consider the following:

- Identify yourself and the subject matter
- Keep messages brief and address only one or two topics
- Keep contents of the voicemail appropriate for business
- Always state the date and time
- Always leave a call back number and repeat numbers slowly.
- Sign off positively.
- Don't ignore messages, reply promptly.
- Requests for information that are complete and concise allow the recipient to quickly and accurately respond to voicemail.

Calls to locations other than 323 should be made by dialing 9+1 + area code and the seven digit number. If you are calling 323 area codes dial 9 and the number.
